SPARKS' PERSPECTIVE

Ron Sparks
Commissioner

"Where there is no vision, there is no hope."

- George Washington Carver

George Washington Carver, an agricultural chemist, had a lasting effect on Alabama agriculture. In his lifetime, Carver developed an innovative method of crop rotation, invented hundreds of uses for peanuts (including making peanut butter), soybeans, pecans, and sweet potatoes, and

"Take care of the waste on the farm and turn it into useful channels." - George Washington Carver

Carver was not satisfied with merely earning an income for his employment at Tuskegee. He was driven to learn. While at Tuskegee, he found alternatives to using European textile dyes during World War I by inventing paints and stains from soybeans. Instead of abusing the soil, he looked for ways to improve it's use. He had vision and saw that Alabama farmers needed to expand their crops if they were to survive. Farmers typically grew only cotton and tobacco during this period, but Carver discovered many other products used today such as bleach, shaving cream, and talcum powder. Carver was ahead of his time. In 1897, still in his early thirties, he came to Alabama to serve as the Director of Agriculture at the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute for Negroes.

showed them how to use crops like peanuts and sweet potatoes to keep the soil rich. Today, we continue to look for alternative uses of agricultural products and waste. Currently, researchers and scientists in Alabama are looking for ways to use corn and litter for alternative fuels. As an agricultural state, we must follow Carver's example and remember that progressive learning and crop experimentation can make a tremendous difference to the future of farming in our state and nation.

"Learn to do common things uncommonly well; we must always keep in mind that anything that helps fill the dinner pail is valuable." - George Washington Carver

Historically, most of Alabama's black farmers are from or work in the Black Belt, but that is slowly beginning to change. Today, Alabama's black farmers are thriving in growing markets using new techniques and ideas. Oliver Washington, in Mobile, started his nursery business as a roadside stand with his father. Now, three generations of the Washington family run one of the largest nursery operations in the state. Lee Jackson, who lives in the Black Belt, raises shrimp instead of crops. With the people of Alabama recognizing the importance of buying local shrimp, Jackson's business has a bright future. Many people in Alabama don't realize that black farmers like George Henry Paris who passed away last month, are an integral part of our agricultural history because they spent their entire lives learning about agriculture. February is Black History Month and I would like to honor those black farmers and scientists who have shown leadership that has improved farming for everyone. Every year Alabama loses more farmers, but farming is what puts food on the table. We need to continue to show our support for the men and women who still strive "to do common things uncommonly well."

Department Kicks Off Premises Id Registration Program

The Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries (ADAI) has taken the first step in establishing the new Alabama Premises Registration System. At the kick off held at the Cullman Stockyard, over 150 farmers signed up for the program that was designed to increase efficiency in identifying the origin and location of animals that are diseased or have been in contact with diseased animals. Emerging diseases such as BSE, commonly known as "mad cow disease," and foot and mouth disease, have greatly intensified public interest in developing a national animal identification program. Alabama is one of the first states in the region to officially implement procedures designed to register premises as part of the national animal ID program to protect animal and human health. The program is intended to help Alabama livestock and poultry farmers to be proactive in protecting their animals, instead of waiting for the USDA to issue mandatory registration requirements that are expected in the future. "This program provides an efficient and straightforward process of identification registration that will prepare Alabama to protect the number one industry in Alabama, agriculture," stated Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries Ron Sparks.

The long-term goal of the department is to work in cooperation with the USDA and the livestock industry to establish a system that can identify all premises and animals that have come in contact with a foreign or domestic animal disease within 48 hours. "This is a monumental but reachable goal," stated Dr. Tony Frazier, State Veterinarian. "We are attempting to develop a practical yet

Dr. Terry Slaten, Associate State Veterinarian (ADAI), explains the premises registration procedure to James Faust of Walter in Cullman County.

New Task Force to Study Needs of Small Family Farms

To Participate in This Effort, All Farmers and Consumers Are Asked to Complete the Adjacent Survey Form

The Alabama Sustainable Agricultural Network (ASAN) and the Department of Agriculture and Industries are forming a task force to identify and help meet the needs of small farmers. In an effort to assure the success of Alabama's small farmers, Commissioner Ron Sparks initiated the "Help Alabama Grow A+" promotional program and fully supports the "Buy Fresh, Buy Local" campaign. Commissioner Sparks has also assisted in establishing farmers markets, enabled a livestock processing facility to be refurbished for small livestock producers, and is promoting alternative livestock production such as grass-feed beef.

ASAN is a private, non-profit organization, representing a wide variety of people with interests in sustainable farming. Members are sustainable farmers, consumers, non-profit organizations, and university agriculture professionals, who have come together to promote and encourage sustainable agriculture in Alabama. ASAN has started a farmer-to-farmer training program with Heifer International, has regular field trips to sustainable farms throughout the state, and is putting together a resource guide to help small farmers connect with resources they might not be aware of.

The new task force will include a cross section of small farmers from across the state, as well as representatives from the Department of Agriculture and Industries, land grant universities, and non-profit organizations working on sustainable agriculture. The task force will focus on farmers who are currently implementing or those interested in transitioning into more sustainable methods, whether for conservation concerns, quality of life, improving soil and productivity, or saving the family farms. Because small farmers' needs are often not addressed, the task force will concentrate on how to keep small farms viable.

To identify the needs of small family farmers, a survey is enclosed in this issue of the Alabama Farmers and Consumers Bulletin. The survey results will give the task force members a basis to work from and will help them to understand the challenges and obstacles faced by farmers statewide. All farmers and consumers are encouraged to complete this survey and to share it with others.

2005 Cattlemen's Convention

The state's largest cattle event of the year, the 62nd annual meeting of the Alabama Cattlemen's Association Convention and Trade Show, will be held at the Arthur Outlaw Convention Center in Mobile, on February 11-12. The Trade Show hours are 2-6 p.m. on Friday and 8-10 a.m. and 2-5 p.m. on Saturday. The Opening General Session will take place on Saturday at 10:15 a.m. with speaker Mark Thomas, Vice President of Global Marketing with the Alabama National Cattlemen's Association. Other speakers include Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries Ron Sparks; Adjunct General Mark Bowen, Alabama National Guard, and Robin Faulkner, DVM, Pfizer Animal Health. For more information on the convention program and to pre-register call 334/265-1867.

comprehensive program that will protect the livestock, as well as farmers and consumers, in Alabama."
The first step in the Premises Registration System is for farmers to fill out the two-page registration form. This information is then processed by the ADAI staff and the location will be given an alphanumeric ID number, which will be provided to the premises owner. Premises registration is simple, free, and voluntary. The form collects information such as location of the farm, owner of the property, and species type of the animals. It does not request production data.

The registration kick off was held at Cullman Stockyard because it has the largest livestock sale participation in Alabama. Since two positive results for BSE were found in Canadian beef in the first two weeks of January, the Department of Agriculture and Industries has accelerated the Premises ID Registration program. The department has enhanced the program by making the registration form available online, distributing the forms extensively throughout the state, and training additional field personnel in Premises Registration procedures. "I want to reassure the farmers and consumers of Alabama that the Department of Agriculture and Industries is taking steps to be proactive to protect animal and human health," stated Sparks. Over the next year, the ADAI will be visiting other locations throughout the state to encourage registration.

Registration forms will be available at all market channels including all Alabama stockyards, as well as online at www.agi.al.state.us. For more information on the Alabama Premises Registration System, please contact Dr. Tony Frazier at 334/240-7253.

Honorees Named for AU Ag Alumni Association's Hall of Honor Awards

Five outstanding Alabama agriculturalists will be honored on February 15 when the Auburn University (AU) Agricultural Alumni Association holds its 2005 Annual Meeting and Hall of Honor Banquet in Auburn.

This year's inductees into the Hall of Honor, which pays tribute to living Alabamians for their contributions to Alabama agriculture, are Ann Barr of Auburn, Gerald Bailey of Cullman and James Cook of Evergreen.

Ms. Barr, the former state 4-H program leader for girls, retired from the Alabama Cooperative Extension System in 1984 after 33 years of service to Alabama's youth. Bailey is the former live production manager for Gold Kist Inc.; he retired in 2001 and is a prominent leader in the state's poultry industry. Cook is a dairyman from Evergreen who has been involved for more than 50 years in the dairy industry's development on the state and national levels.

The late Hoyt Adair, who operated Classical Fruits orchard in Moulton, and Henry Orr, a beloved AU horticulture professor who lived in Opelika, will be added to the list of Pioneer Award winners, who are honored posthumously for their contributions to the state's agricultural sector.

The awards will be presented during the banquet, which will be held at the AU Hotel and Dixon Conference Center in Auburn. Registration for the banquet begins at 5:30 p.m. and the banquet will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Tickets to the banquet and awards ceremony are $40 per person and must be purchased by February 10. For the first time, the association is offering corporate sponsorships that help fund the banquet. Gold Corporate sponsorships are available for $500 and Silver Corporate sponsorships are available for $250. Contributors will be recognized in the banquet program. For more information about the banquet, contact Elaine Rollo at 334-844-3204 or at rollome@auburn.edu.

On the Header:

In honor of Black History Month, featured on the header are fresh collard greens like those grown by Autauga County farmer, Mr. Odell Brown. Mr. Brown has been farming in Browntown, Alabama for over 50 years. Mrs. Johnnie Mae Brown, runs the family's booth in the Retail Shed at the Montgomery State Farmers Market on Federal Drive. In the spring and summer months the Brown family has an abundance of produce available at the market facility including: bell peppers, butter beans, corn, a variety of peas (black-eyed, crowder, lady finger, purple hull, white acre, & zipper), squash, tomatoes, and watermelons. We are grateful for the significant contribution Mr. Brown and his family have made to Alabama Agriculture over the years. Please make sure to enjoy some of Alabama's best locally grown produce this summer!
